

WHO'S GONNA SAVE US? EP01 RESPONSES

Statement attributable to APPEA Chief Executive Samantha McCulloch:

As a major investor in decarbonisation technology and renewables, the oil and gas industry is committed to reducing greenhouse gas emissions across the economy to net zero by 2050 and is spending billions of dollars on emissions reduction measures.

Given we represent a sector central to Australia's economic and cleaner energy future - which employs 80,000 people and is responsible for enabling almost $500 billion in economic activity annually - APPEA routinely engages with a range of stakeholders for consultations. Like any industry group consultations, these can include members, supply chain operators, community groups, traditional owners, unions, other industry groups and politicians and are intended to improve understanding of the sector and, ultimately, deliver better policy outcomes for the nation.
