Jess and Josh are best friends, housemates and twentysomething. While their friends finish uni degrees, climb the corporate ladder and settle down, Jess and Josh live for the weekend. When they find themselves unemployed, getting evicted and constantly dodging the dreaded question, "So what do you do with yourselves?", they decide it's time to become their own bosses.

In each episode of TWENTYSOMETHING, Jess and Josh set out in search of their big break. Jess, with a restless need to prove herself and a fear of becoming boring and predictable, contrasts with the more content and cautious Josh. No matter how crazy, weird or ridiculous some of Jess' ideas get, it's her confidence and blind faith that makes Josh want to join her.

Their entrepreneurial pursuits range from a hugely successful erotic house cleaning service, to an elite babysitters' agency, and even profiting from returning lost dogs for big rewards. Although Jess and Josh have every intention of succeeding, they somehow manage to self-destruct, with their schemes ending in chaos.

With Josh under added pressure from his older and more successful brother, Nick, to join the family advertising business, Jess finds a welcome distraction in Billy, an on again/off again ex who has recently returned home from an overseas adventure. Will Josh finally conform to the life his brother has planned for him or will Jess' friendship win him over, once and for all?

Whether it is finding out how you got home last night or what to do with the rest of your life, the twentysomething world is filled with massive highs, heart breaking lows and plenty of drinks in between.
