CATALYST makes sense of our amazing, extraordinary and constantly changing world.

From medicine to the environment, space exploration to psychology, this multi-award winning magazine series takes science out of the lab and investigates the 'real world' implications, ethics and politics behind the very latest advances.

Covering a diverse range of subjects, the CATALYST team of experienced science journalists delivers a refreshingly clear and illuminating explanation of some of the world's more complicated topics: climate change, nuclear-solar-wind-tidal-geothermal power, genetics, nanotechnology, quantum physics, medical miracles and the ongoing and literally 'mind-expanding' exploration of our most complex organ, the human brain.

Every episode tells us something we didn't know, takes us somewhere we've never been, or introduces us to concepts that are beyond belief.

Find out about the man who solved the mathematical problem that's eluded the world's greatest minds for over 100 years, take the ultimate road trip in the car of tomorrow, journey to the country that will be the great powerhouse and power-consumer of the future, solve a murder mystery that baffled police for over half a century, break the un-breakable code, develop drought-resistant crops and discover what's so important about gender roles in reptilian society.

Whether exploring the outer reaches of the universe, or the innermost secrets of our extraordinary bodies, this half hour magazine series investigates the dynamic forces and 'hot button' issues that are changing the face of the world today.

An ongoing half hour magazine series plus half hour specials
