EPISODE 10: DURIANS

FUNCTION OF DEMONSTRATIVES

Whether speaking or listening, reading or writing, we use reference type words to identify people or things in a particular context, to refer back to ideas, facts or information, to point to something mentioned earlier or to track participants (someone or something) in a story.

It may be talking about our preference for 'these shoes' in relation to some other ones, reading about 'those who participated in the survey', writing about 'this remedy to a pollution problem' as opposed to another or listening for information about the answer to 'the person who stole that car'.

These are examples of demonstratives and their function is to indicate the proximity in time and space of what is being identified, referred to, discussed, described, pointed to, explained etc.

Identifying demonstratives

There are four demonstratives:

Singular	Plural
this	these that	those

They can function either as adjectives or as pronouns.

STUDY TIPS

Remember when referring to or talking about people or things, which are near to you in space or time, use this and these.

If they are more distant in space or time then that and those are used.

Demonstrative adjectives

Singular	Demonstrative Adjective	Noun	Verb
	This	fruit	is	refreshing.
	These	shoes	are	comfortable.
Plural	That	house	is	sold.
	Those	apartments	sold	recently.

Demonstrative pronouns

Singular	Demonstrative Pronouns	Verb
	This	is	Jane
	These	are	my friends.
Plural	That	is	appalling.
	Those	are	delicious.

Other forms

Singular

this } that } + one

Which hat do you like? I like this one. I like that one.

Plural

these those

Which flowers do you prefer? These are more fragrant than those.

Comparative statements using that/those

noun phrase + verb + ...er than + that + of noun phrase
 those

The fruit in tropical regions is tastier than that of other areas.

Meaning

Demonstratives are used to differentiate between the proximity of a speaker, listener, thing, object etc. in terms of both time and space.

Proximity
nearness		remoteness
space
'here'	The apartment in this building is going to auction. These students are waiting to enrol.	'there'	I don't know whether that apartment will be auctioned. Those students are picking up their student card.
time
'now'	Do you know which courses they've scheduled this semester? These days we correspond via e-mail.	'then'	Did you know they only offered one elective in that semester? In those days we used "snail mail".

Context and meaning

Demonstrative	Meaning	Example
this	an action or experience which takes place in the near future	This is going to be interesting film!
that	an action or experience which took place in the past	That was a great movie!
this/these	showing interest in or approval of someone/ something	I'm dying to hear about this holiday on the Riviera.
that/those	showing dislike of someone/ something	You aren't buying that suit, are you?
those who....	an expression which refers to those people who	Those who participated in the questionnaire will be compensated.
