

25 September 2026

Max Maddison, Journalist

It is every journalist's job to evaluate information on its merit and validate its authenticity. Of course, often this information comes from third-party sources that may have various motivations. My focus as a journalist is always on whether the material itself is verified, accurate and in the public interest - which this story was.