Dear Dr. Pepperell,

Greetings of the day!

Thank you for your prompt reply. As you mentioned in your mail, we can understand your hectic schedule and we accept your decision to withdraw. But you have mentioned in your second point about the quality of articles that were assigned to you, let me tell you one thing, we assign the articles to editor to grade the article and to take the final decision whether to publish or not based on their observation. We do as you suggest, if you say not to publish we will not and we didn't publish any article that was suggested to be rejected by you. We rely only on assigned editor's decision, and it's quite surprising to hear such comment. We are sorry for the bitter experience, but we really value our editors decision.

We are going to miss a scholarly editor. We will remove your details and membership from editorial board within 24 working hours.

Thank you for your support and encouragement till date in our journey.

Wish you all luck ahead.

Regards,
Editorial Assistant

Dear Lisa,

I have replied to the writers of emails from yours and other OMICS journals, during the last 6-9 months, indicating I no longer wished to receive any emails or articles for assessment from you. This has been for 2 reasons.

1. I am too busy to do this.
2. I have been unimpressed by many of the articles sent to me to review, and have not had replies from you concerning what has happened to the articles I have suggested should not be published, despite the fact I have been classified as Editor in Chief of some of these Journals.

Please ensure this email gets to the senior management of OMICS and remove me from any position within your whole organisation. Please confirm this action with me by email ASAP.

Yours
Prof Roger Pepperell
