Response from a Daily Telegraph spokesperson,

The Daily Telegraph will always support events that engage the community and stimulate our regional economies. We take our role to hold officialdom and institutions to account seriously, and on any given day editorial decisions are made to reflect the best mix of news, information and entertainment for our audience. Peter V'landys' willingness to express his displeasure about our coverage is well known, and nothing constrains our ability to report as we see fit to best reflect our audience's interests.
