Response from a News Corp Australia spokesperson:

"We publish hundreds of columnists across multiple mastheads and magazines, websites and television and other platforms. These represent a wide range of views, opinions and positions on a range of topics. You identify a handful of columnists to suit your own agenda. To suggest, as Media Watch is doing, that on major issues in Australia there cannot be many opinions aired across media platforms is contrary to the role of free and open media."