

Statement from John Lehmann, Editor, The Australian:

Ian Plimer's work appeared in The Australian's Commentary section where we have published a range of pieces on the climate debate over many years.

Plimer has written extensively on this issue and his voice is one of many which are important in the mix.

A range of reports and analyses of climate change are published in The Australian on a regular basis, one of the most recent on P1 of the newspaper and online on November 28.

<https://www.theaustralian.com.au/science/planet-earth-cascades-towards-a-hothouse-say-scientists/news-story/98e4f13c69383189722e3254a8037aa2>

From Ian Plimer, geologist:

I certainly stand by my piece.

The science that I used to underpin my piece has been long known, validated and duplicated and is supported by other geologists who are equally or more qualified than me.

The support I have had from geologists is huge because they deal with evidence whereas Climate Feedback deals with incomplete models in an attempt to predict the future.