Statement from a BHP spokesperson

The purpose of the event in question was for BHP, along with Rio Tinto and Caterpillar, to provide insight to the technology, engineering and operational realities, progress and plans relative to the transition to battery electric haul trucks at mine sites in the Pilbara.

Other iron ore miners in the Pilbara have also provided details of their electrification ambitions over the past few years though it is not known if the pace of implementation is on track or has slowed from any updates or media coverage.

The simple answer to both your questions is no.
