

Achievement Demonstrated Criteria for Achievement	Journalism Student! If you are completing things at this level, you are showing that you are on your way to understanding the ways a story can be presented.	Rookie Reporter! If you are completing things at this level, you are showing that you have thought about and demonstrated in parts, the ways a story can be presented.	Experienced Reporter! If you are completing things at this level, you are showing that you have been thinking very deeply and shown a very good understanding of the ways a story can be presented.	Award -Winning! If you are completing things at this level, you are showing that you have been thinking very deeply and shown an outstanding understanding about the ways a story can be presented.
Use of language for intended audience and purpose.	Language and tone used in the comic does not suit the specified audience. There might be parts of the comic that are incomplete. There may be consistent spelling and grammatical errors.	Language and tone used in the comic suits the audience and purpose in some places but not always consistently. There may be a few spelling and grammatical errors.	Language and tone used in the comic suits the audience and purpose consistently. The range of vocabulary, writing techniques is reflective of what is expected for the stage of learning.	Language and tone used in the comic suits the audience and purpose perfectly. The range of vocabulary and writing techniques used exceeds what is expected at this stage of learning.

