

22-August-2025

Statement from Peter McDonald,

Speaking on behalf of the Migration Hub at the Australian National University, it is our expectation that net overseas migration will continue to fall when the next round of numbers is published in September. This is mainly because we expect that the number of temporary residents leaving Australia will continue to rise over the next two years as the visas expire for those who entered Australia in large numbers when the border reopened following COVID.