Statement from 2GB spokesperson

The Sydney Now program covered the “Furries” issue in response to significant listener and social media correspondence. The program made clear the claims were unverified.

Across the week, a variety of interviews and views were aired, including the positions of the NSW Education Minister, Independent Schools Association, and Catholic Schools NSW.

A child psychologist who has worked with students identifying with the furry subculture was interviewed. During the production process, a family member also shared their account of furries in the classroom.
