Response from Editor-in-chief, Crikey, Sophie Black

The reason Crikey exists is to do things that only people can do: talk to humans, think hard and differently, speak truth to power and have fun. Generative AI can't do that, which is why we've banned its use in the production of our writing and other content. Given the way that big tech is mashing AI into every area of our lives, it's becoming more challenging to keep it out of our work. However, as we constantly explore with our staff and contributors where the line is, we want our audience to know that our guiding principle is humans doing journalism for humans.
